1. Executive Summary

Bloom & Brew is a fictional independent bakery and coffee shop built around artisan pastries, scratch-made sourdough, and specialty coffee. This document lays out a complete social media and digital marketing content plan designed to grow the bakery's local following, deepen loyalty among existing customers, and open a steady stream of corporate and catering business.

The plan is organized around one guiding idea: every channel should do a single job well rather than compete for the same attention. Instagram and Facebook build everyday local demand through visual storytelling and small, geo-targeted promotions. LinkedIn is treated as a deliberate business-development channel — not an afterthought — carrying founder credibility, behind-the-business storytelling, and direct outreach to offices and event planners who order catering or set up team coffee subscriptions. Local SEO, email and loyalty marketing, and small-scale influencer partnerships round out the mix, giving the bakery channels that don't depend entirely on social algorithms.

The sections that follow define the target audience, five repeatable content pillars, a four-week sample posting calendar, channel-by-channel tactics, a three-phase rollout plan, an illustrative budget, and the KPIs used to judge whether the strategy is working.

2. Brand Overview

Bloom & Brew is a fictional independent bakery and coffee shop that sells artisan pastries, sourdough bread, and specialty coffee. The shop is positioned as a neighborhood gathering place — the kind of spot where the smell of fresh bread reaches the sidewalk and regulars are greeted by name. As the brand matures, it wants to build a loyal local following while attracting new customers and, increasingly, local businesses and corporate clients, through a coordinated social media and digital marketing presence.

Mission

To bring genuine, from-scratch baking and thoughtful coffee to the neighborhood, one warm interaction at a time — in the shop and online.

Brand Snapshot

Category	Detail
Business type	Independent bakery & coffee shop
Core products	Artisan pastries, scratch sourdough, specialty coffee, seasonal menu items
Price point	Mid-range, everyday accessible indulgence
Service model	Counter service, limited seating, plus catering & bulk/corporate orders
Personality	Warm, genuine, a little playful, quietly proud of its craft

Brand Values

- Quality first — everything is made from scratch, with ingredients the team can vouch for

- Community — the shop shows up for its neighborhood, not just the other way around
- Craft & transparency — customers see the process, not just the finished product
- Warmth over polish — real moments beat overly staged ones

3. Goals & Objectives

The overarching goal is to create a simple, actionable social media and digital marketing content plan that identifies the target audience, defines a practical digital marketing strategy, generates content ideas, and lays out a weekly posting schedule — with expanded emphasis on LinkedIn — across Instagram, Facebook, and LinkedIn. The plan also explains how that strategy is applied in practice, so it can move from idea to execution.

SMART Objectives

Objective	Metric	Target	Timeframe
Grow local brand awareness	Instagram + Facebook followers	+20%	90 days
Increase engagement quality	Engagement rate (likes+comments+saves / reach)	4.5%+ average	Ongoing, reviewed weekly
Build a B2B pipeline	Inbound catering/corporate inquiries via LinkedIn	8–10 qualified leads	Per quarter
Grow an owned audience	Email/loyalty sign-ups	500 subscribers	6 months
Strengthen local search presence	Google Business Profile views → direction requests	+25%	90 days

4. Target Audience & Personas

Bloom & Brew's content is built around one core audience persona, supported by a secondary persona that represents the growing B2B and catering opportunity, plus a handful of secondary audience segments.

Primary Persona — "Busy Brianna"

Attribute	Details
Name (persona)	"Busy Brianna" — local professional, age 26–38
Lifestyle	Works nearby, values quality coffee & fresh baked goods, follows local food trends
Platforms used	Instagram (daily), Facebook (events/community groups), LinkedIn (browsing company pages, industry news)
Motivations	Convenience, aesthetic/Instagrammable moments, supporting local small business

Attribute	Details
Content she responds to	Short videos, behind-the-scenes content, real customer reviews, limited-time offers

Brianna is the everyday engine of the business — she is the audience Instagram and Facebook are built for, and the person whose habits shape most of the five content pillars.

Secondary Persona — "Operations Owais"

Attribute	Details
Name (persona)	"Operations Owais" — office manager / EA, age 30–45
Lifestyle	Manages a 20–80 person office; owns event planning, perks, and vendor relationships
Platforms used	LinkedIn (daily, professional), email
Motivations	Reliability, easy ordering, simple invoicing, making the team happy with minimal hassle
Content he responds to	Founder credibility posts, clear catering menus/pricing, client stories, direct and specific outreach

Owais represents the buyer behind Bloom & Brew's growing catering and corporate coffee subscription revenue. He rarely engages publicly — he observes quietly and reaches out directly once he trusts the brand, which is exactly why LinkedIn's role is about credibility-building as much as visibility.

Secondary Audiences

- Local families looking for weekend treats and a cozy place to sit
- Remote workers/students seeking a coffee-shop workspace
- Food bloggers and local foodies who share aesthetic content
- Local businesses and offices exploring catering, group orders, or team coffee subscriptions — reached primarily through LinkedIn

Across every segment, the throughline is trust built through visible, unpolished authenticity — real bakers, real ingredients, real customers — rather than a heavily produced brand voice.

5. Competitive Landscape

Bloom & Brew operates in a crowded local food-and-drink feed, so its content has to earn attention rather than assume it. A brief look at the competitive set clarifies where the brand should lean in.

Competitor Type	Typical Strength	Bloom & Brew's Opportunity
National coffee chains	Consistency, convenience, loyalty apps	Compete on craft, personality, and a real human story
Other independent cafés	Local goodwill, aesthetic interiors	Differentiate with process-forward content and a clearer B2B offer
Grocery/bakery counters	Price, convenience	Compete on freshness, occasion (gifting, events), and community ties

Positioning Statement

Bloom & Brew wins by being the most human bakery in its feed — visibly hand-made, visibly local, and, on LinkedIn, visibly credible to the businesses around it.

6. Brand Voice & Tone Guidelines

Voice: warm, genuine, a little playful, and knowledgeable without being precious. The brand should read like the person behind the counter, not a marketing department.

Do's and Don'ts

Do	Don't
Write like a person behind the counter talking to a regular	Over-promise ("best in the city") without backing it up
Show process and imperfection — flour on the counter, a slightly lopsided loaf	Use pushy sales language on Instagram or Facebook
Keep LinkedIn posts substantive — credibility over cleverness	Let LinkedIn read like a sales pitch — lead with the story, not the ask
Reply to comments and reviews in a genuine, specific voice	Use generic, copy-paste responses to customer feedback

7. Content Pillars & Ideas

All content ideas are organized under five repeatable pillars so posting never runs out of ideas. Each pillar below includes its core content ideas, the platforms/formats it suits best, and a sample caption direction to guide tone.

Pillar 1 — Behind the Scenes

- Early-morning baking process reels
- Meet-the-baker / staff spotlight posts
- "A day in the life" short-form video clips

Best for: Instagram Reels, Stories

Sample caption direction: 5am, first tray out, and the ovens are just getting started.

Pillar 2 — Product Spotlight

- Weekly featured pastry or drink carousel
- Close-up shots of new seasonal menu items
- "How it's made" short recipe videos

Best for: Instagram carousel/Reels

Sample caption direction: Today's carousel: cardamom buns, warm and ready by 8.

Pillar 3 — Community & Customers

- Reposting customer photos/reviews (UGC)
- Local event partnerships and collabs
- Polls and Q&A stickers in Stories

Best for: Instagram Stories, Facebook

Sample caption direction: Tag someone who needs a Saturday morning pastry run.

Pillar 4 — Promotions & Announcements

- Weekly specials and limited-time offers
- Holiday/seasonal menu launches
- Hours changes, new openings, or milestones (e.g. "1 year anniversary!")

Best for: Facebook, Instagram feed

Sample caption direction: This week only: two sourdough loaves, one great deal.

Pillar 5 — LinkedIn & Business Storytelling

- Founder updates, milestones, and lessons learned running a small business
- Behind-the-business features: sourcing local ingredients, hiring, and team growth
- Catering, corporate gifting, and bulk/wholesale order spotlights
- Community-impact posts: local sourcing, sustainability, and charity partnerships

Best for: LinkedIn Company Page

Sample caption direction: One year in: what we got wrong about hiring our first baker.

8. Digital Marketing Strategy

Beyond organic posting, Bloom & Brew's digital presence works best as a layered strategy — combining organic content, paid promotion, search visibility, and direct communication so each channel reinforces the others rather than competing for the same attention.

8.1 Organic Social Content

The five content pillars above form the daily/weekly foundation across Instagram, Facebook, and LinkedIn, keeping the brand visible and building trust without relying on ad spend. Each pillar is scheduled on a rotation so the feed never leans too heavily on one type of post, and every organic post carries a soft, single call-to-action — visit, tag a friend, or save for later — rather than a hard sell.

8.2 Paid Social & Local Targeting

Small, geo-targeted boosted posts on Instagram and Facebook (roughly a 3–5 km radius around the shop) promote weekly specials, new launches, and seasonal offers to people nearby who haven't discovered the bakery yet. Budgets are kept small and iterative: each boosted post runs for 3–5 days with a single clear offer, and the geo-radius is tightened or widened based on which distance converts best.

8.3 LinkedIn & B2B Growth

LinkedIn is used deliberately as a business-development channel, not just another feed. Founder storytelling and behind-the-business content build credibility, while direct posts about catering, corporate orders, and coffee subscriptions target local offices, HR teams planning events, and nearby remote-work hubs. This is also where hiring posts live, supporting employer branding. Outreach is manual and personal in the early phase — short, non-salesy connection notes referencing a specific post or shared local interest — rather than mass messaging, to protect the credibility the content is building.

8.4 Local SEO & Google Business Profile

Keeping the Google Business Profile current — hours, photos, menu, and posts — and encouraging customer reviews helps the bakery rank well for searches like "bakery near me" or "coffee shop [neighborhood]." Photos are refreshed monthly, the Q&A section is monitored for common questions (parking, dietary options), and every review — positive or critical — gets a personal reply within 48 hours.

8.5 Email & Loyalty Marketing

A simple QR code on tables and receipts invites customers into a weekly email list and loyalty program, turning one-time visitors into repeat customers and giving the team a channel that isn't dependent on social media algorithms. The weekly email leads with one story — a new item, a behind-the-scenes note — rather than a flat discount blast, which keeps open rates healthy.

8.6 Influencer & UGC Partnerships

Small, ongoing collaborations with local micro-influencers and food bloggers (product gifting in exchange for honest posts), plus an always-on branded hashtag, make customer content easy to find, credit, and repost. Partners are chosen for genuine overlap with the brand's neighborhood and aesthetic rather than follower count alone, and every repost credits the original creator.

9. Hashtag Strategy

A small, consistent set of hashtags keeps content discoverable without looking cluttered. Tags are grouped by purpose rather than used at random.

Category	Example Tags	Purpose
Branded	#BloomAndBrewBakery, #BloomAndBrewMoments	Builds a searchable archive of the brand's own content and UGC
Local / community	#[City]Eats, #[Neighborhood]Coffee	Surfaces posts to nearby users browsing local tags
Pillar-specific	#BehindTheBakery, #MeetTheMaker	Groups recurring content types for easy browsing
LinkedIn / B2B	#SmallBusinessSpotlight, #LocalCatering	Signals relevance to office managers and event planners

Note: [City] and [Neighborhood] are placeholders to be replaced with the bakery's actual location once deployed.

10. Weekly Posting Schedule & Four-Week Calendar

The table below sets the repeating weekly cadence, with LinkedIn expanded from one post to three per week to support the B2B and hiring goals covered in Section 8. The weekly cadence repeats with rotating content within each pillar, so the schedule stays consistent without becoming repetitive — the four weeks below (Week 1 is the base schedule) illustrate how that rotation plays out in practice.

Posting Frequency Summary

- Instagram: 5x/week (feed posts, reels, stories)
- Facebook: 2x/week (community + promotions)
- LinkedIn: 3x/week — up from 1x/week, now covering founder credibility, behind-the-business content, and catering/B2B + hiring outreach (Monday, Wednesday, Friday)

11. Strategy Implementation Plan — How We Apply This

Turning the strategy above into daily practice happens in three rolling phases, so the workload stays realistic for a small, independent team.

Phase 1 — Foundation (Weeks 1–4)

- Set up and optimize all three profiles plus Google Business Profile with consistent branding, bio links, and highlights
- Build a simple content calendar (spreadsheet or a free tool like Later/Buffer) using the five-pillar system above
- Create 5–6 reusable Canva templates for recurring post types
- Record a baseline: current followers, engagement rate, and website/menu clicks on each platform

Phase 2 — Growth (Months 2–3)

- Hold the weekly posting cadence consistently across all platforms, including the new LinkedIn schedule
- Start a small paid-ads test budget on Instagram/Facebook, one geo-targeted offer at a time
- Launch the email/loyalty sign-up and send the first monthly newsletter

- Begin direct LinkedIn outreach: connect with 5–10 local businesses or offices per week for catering and corporate leads
- Start outreach to 2–3 local micro-influencers for product gifting

Phase 3 — Optimize (Month 4 onward)

- Review analytics monthly and double down on the two or three best-performing post types per platform
- Shift paid budget toward whichever offers or audiences convert best
- Turn successful LinkedIn conversations into a simple catering/corporate order menu
- Refresh content pillars and posting times each quarter based on real audience activity

Platform Application at a Glance

Platform	Primary Objective	Key Tactic	Main Tool
Instagram	Brand awareness & aesthetic discovery	Reels, carousels, Stories polls	Later/Buffer + Canva
Facebook	Local community & event visibility	Community groups, event posts, boosted specials	Meta Business Suite
LinkedIn	B2B leads, hiring, founder credibility	Founder posts, catering/B2B outreach, behind-the-business features	LinkedIn Company Page

Illustrative Monthly Budget Split

Category	Approx. Share
Paid social ads (Instagram/Facebook boosted posts)	45%
Design & scheduling tools (Canva, Later/Buffer)	20%
Influencer & UGC product gifting	20%
Email/loyalty platform	15%

The split favors paid local reach early on, since Instagram and Facebook boosted posts are the fastest way to put the brand in front of nearby people who haven't discovered it yet. As the email list and LinkedIn relationships mature, more of the budget can shift toward retention and B2B tools.

KPIs & Review Cadence

Channel	Key Metric(s)	Review Cadence
Instagram	Engagement rate, reach, saves	Weekly

Channel	Key Metric(s)	Review Cadence
Facebook	Event RSVPs, post reach, page likes	Weekly
LinkedIn	Connection growth, post impressions, inbound catering/B2B inquiries	Monthly
Email & Loyalty	Sign-up count, open rate	Monthly
Overall Business	Website/menu clicks, in-store mentions of social posts	Monthly

12. Risk & Contingency Planning

A content plan also needs a plan for when things don't go smoothly. The table below covers the most likely friction points and how the team responds.

Risk	Mitigation
Negative review or public complaint	Respond promptly, take specifics offline, follow up publicly once resolved
Sudden drop in organic reach (algorithm change)	Lean harder on the email/loyalty list and LinkedIn direct outreach, which don't depend on the algorithm
Slow season (weather, holidays)	Pre-planned promotional calendar with seasonal offers ready in advance
Content fatigue / sameness	Quarterly refresh of pillar content ideas and posting times based on analytics
Key team member unavailable for content (baker/founder)	Keep a running bank of unused photos/video for 2–3 weeks of buffer content

13. Key Skills Demonstrated

- Content planning — organizing ideas into repeatable pillars and a schedule
- Audience understanding — building personas to guide content decisions across both B2C and B2B segments
- Cross-platform strategy — adapting the same brand story per platform
- Digital marketing strategy — layering organic, paid, local SEO, email, and influencer tactics into one plan
- B2B/LinkedIn strategy — using LinkedIn deliberately for leads, hiring, and credibility, not just visibility
- Basic budget & KPI planning — allocating effort/spend and defining what success looks like per channel
- Risk planning — anticipating friction points and preparing a response before they happen

14. Next Steps

- Design simple templates (Canva) for recurring post types
- Set up and fully optimize the Google Business Profile
- Track weekly and monthly KPIs, and double down on top-performing content
- Run Phase 1 (Foundation) for the first month before adding paid spend
- Adjust posting schedule and platform mix based on real audience activity data
- Revisit the LinkedIn/B2B push after 90 days to check whether it's generating real catering or corporate leads

15. Appendix: Sample Caption Bank

A small bank of ready-to-adapt caption directions for each pillar, meant as starting points rather than final copy.

Behind the Scenes

- 5am, first tray out, and the ovens are just getting started. #BehindTheBakery
